

nResult: Testing over 6,000 different software and hardware projects

nResult's Lab is an extension of your internal quality assurance lab. It is a production line that we have run for over twelve years - scheduling projects efficiently and successfully - over 6,000 projects so far. We work closely with your quality assurance group to establish and augment your specific testing needs. We want to become an integral part of your internal development and testing cycle. If you need to test with a product not currently in our lab, we will do all we can to accommodate you!

nResult: The Ultimate Testing Laboratory

nResult's Lab is an extension of your internal quality assurance lab. It is a production line that we have run for over twelve years - scheduling projects efficiently and successfully - with literally millions of individual tests for thousands of projects.

Our laboratory is composed of hundreds of computing devices, thousands of peripherals and devices to provide a flexible and totally configurable machine to service your needs. In the laboratory it is likely that we can service your testing need without any need to buy or lease extra components - besides your new product of course.

Equipment

We stock and maintain the best tools available in the market today. We have tools to check for HTML validation, Load/Stress testing and Test automation in all areas of hardware and software testing. We use the well-known Mercury toolsets as well as the Rational Products in our software application testing areas. We also utilize other tools such as debuggers, file, disk, port, and registry monitors, which allows us to provide your developers with the exact information they need to fix your product quickly and efficiently.

Reporting

Through the nResult gateway, programmers and project managers can create, edit, review, and comment on test scripts and results. You can determine the hardware, software and processor type of the machines we test your application on. How long we test, how many iterations, what type of tests (load, regression, functionality,...) and much more are all under your control. In addition, the detailed reports provide all of the necessary information to compile and report on testing matrices.

Management and Control of QA lab

Through nResult's proprietary gateway our reports are available to you 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. All reports are customized to your specific needs, and with our easy to use interface we can change the look and feel of your reports on the fly. All test results are entered into the reporting system in real time. As soon as we find a defect, your developers can start fixing it.

nResult your virtual QA lab

Seamless Integration

- nResult is able to integrate with your development environment seamlessly. We are able to communicate with your developers and project manager as timely as your internal QA department.
- Our proprietary tools integrate seamlessly with our reporting system to provide you with complete and accurate results.

Real-time Results

- Our state of the art test lab provides instant feedback. As we discover defects, your developers are instantly provided with the nature and cause of the defect.
- There is also a very detailed log available that provides your developers with a very low level and in-depth look at the application's interactions with the system.

Virtual QA lab

Your development staff has hands on access to our test lab. Your developers are actually able to take control of any of the machines in our test lab, install software, change/verify settings, or even run pre-recorded automated tests. nResult's Lab is an extension of your internal quality assurance lab. It is a production line that we have run for over twelve years - scheduling projects efficiently and successfully - over 6,000 projects so far. We work closely with your quality assurance group to establish and augment your specific testing needs. We want to become an integral part of your internal development and testing cycle. If you need to test with a product not currently in our lab, we will do all we can to accommodate you!
